

Master's Introduction

The biggest decision taken by Selwyn's governing body in 2016 was to give the go-ahead for a new library and auditorium. It's a project that is estimated to cost around £12 million, and it will transform the north side of the college – on the corner of Grange Road and West Road – by completing Ann's Court. It's a thrilling prospect, but one that has only been taken after a lot of thought about how we see the future of the college.

A new library and auditorium were part of the masterplan for Selwyn drawn up twenty years ago. The first stages were the two acclaimed existing buildings of Ann's Court that have provided more accommodation and college offices, and we have a long-term goal that will see the expansion of the college's rooms still further by building along Grange Road next to B staircase. But more public space for our students and guests has moved to the top of the agenda, and that's what we're aiming to provide.

In place of the current library, which is crowded and out-of-date, we want to offer a study centre fit for the 21st century. Books are still in high demand, but so is digital material for learning – and we can bring those two things together in an environment that enables students to work individually and collaboratively. Then in the auditorium we will have space for lectures, performance and seminars: the kind of activities that enhance the life of a college.

In pressing ahead, we know we are setting a challenge for ourselves and for our alumni and friends. Bricks and mortar are only part of what we need to invest in, and we've set out in the past year our three overwhelming priorities: buildings, certainly, but also teaching and student support. They go together. We will not attract the best students if we don't have the right infrastructure in the college; and it's non-negotiable that we have excellent teaching and pastoral care, alongside our combination of iconic older buildings and modern facilities.

We are also determined to maintain the tradition of this college that it should be open to anyone who is bright enough, irrespective of their background and their financial means. So we now move into the detailed planning.

We will devise a campaign plan for the library and auditorium while maintaining the impetus on the funding of academic posts and on providing grants for students who would otherwise not be able to afford to study here.

The aim is one that I'm sure we all share: keeping Selwyn as one of the best colleges in a university that leads the world. And I'm confident that we can fight on these multiple fronts because we already benefit hugely from the generosity of hundreds of alumni and friends, and we know this is a strong community that has always been prepared to support future generations.

In the past twelve months, while the outside world has been beset by so much turbulence, our students have again provided multiple reasons for cheer. The number of firsts and distinctions has continued to increase, and our musicians, our sports teams and our actors manage to excel too. I do not recognise the negative stereotypes of modern students as portrayed in the newspapers: what I find here are talented, hardworking young people who relish intellectual argument and debate. I fear that my generation hasn't left them a golden inheritance, but living among them I feel overwhelming optimism about the influence they will have on the world.

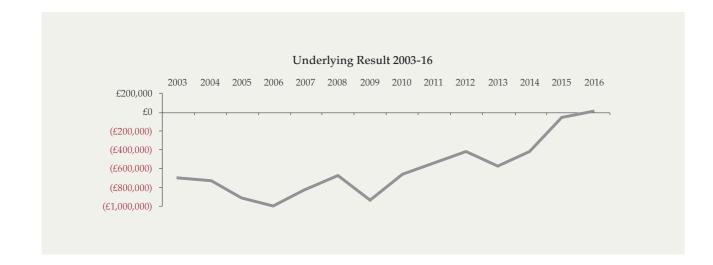

And that will be the proposition we put to our supporters in the coming years. We have all benefitted from the pioneers who founded, and funded, this and similar institutions; and many of us, certainly including me, were able to launch our careers because of the backing we'd had from taxpayers as well as philanthropists.

In tougher times, what are we prepared to do to ensure that the opportunities are still there? How much faith do we have in the future? We will be tackling together these questions and more – and I am absolutely sure we will come up with the right answers.

Bursar's Report

For the first time in 15 years, the college has a bottom line number not written in red ink. I refer to the underlying money-in versus money-out result rather than the rather complex statutory accounts that we submit to the Charities Commission. This amounted to the sum of £20,029 or a net profit margin of 0.16%. This is an excellent result, representing an improvement of £75,000 odd over last year's deficit of £54,476, and the fruit of a lot of hard work over the years by a lot of people. It also triggered the requirement to amend the chart title below that has tracked the evolution of the deficit over the past 15 years.

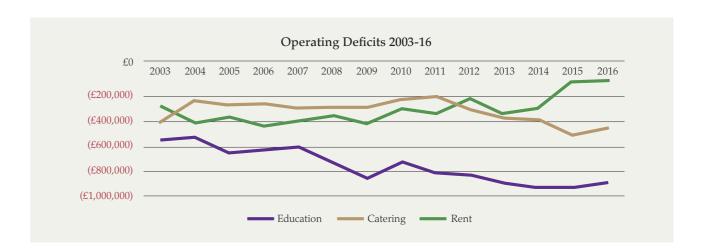

Fee income from undergraduate and graduate students rose by 6% to £2.3 million. Higher graduate fee receipts as a new fee-sharing agreement with the University bedded in, along with a modest increase in student numbers and a slightly higher proportion of non-EU undergraduates all had a positive effect. A 1.7% decrease in education expenditure to £2.6 million led to a modest reduction in the education deficit from £0.92 million to £0.89 million.

Income from accommodation of college members rose by 6.1% to £2.3 million, consolidating the gains that resulted from the Cripps Court refurbishment last year. The corresponding 5.1% increase in related expenditure to £2.3 million resulted in a further narrowing of the accommodation deficit to £71,000, a result that reflects many years of work on rent negotiations. We aspire to break even on the rent account but are also constrained by welfare considerations for our students at a time of tightening budgets. It is a fine line to tread.

Income from catering for college members remained flat at £0.8 million, a disappointing result mitigated by a fall of 3.5% in related expenditure to £1.2 million, producing a 9% reduction in the member catering deficit to £0.5 million. Student spend in Hall rose by 2.1% in the Easter Term 2016 to £3.40 per day, but this remains well down on the record levels of £3.67 seen in 2011. The number of undergraduates using the Hall rose from 365 to 372, although utilisation by postgraduate students fell from 99 to 95 in the Easter term.

In the light of the above, the college undertook an external review of its catering operation which has concluded that we need to modernise and generally bring our student offering in line with current tastes. We will do this as we also seek to break even on the catering account.

The conference business had a good year, with revenue rising by 3% to £1.4 million, driven by a 20% growth in the day conference business to £0.5 million. This revenue makes an important contribution to the daily cost of keeping the doors open, releasing funds to spend on education.

We expect to spend more on education than we receive in fees; the raison d'être of the college lies therein. We do however continue to lose money on the catering and rent accounts, given the high cost of labour and of maintenance of our historic buildings. With the ability to raise prices constrained by welfare considerations as outlined above, we must look to our investment income and conference revenues to offset these losses. This will continue to be a high priority.

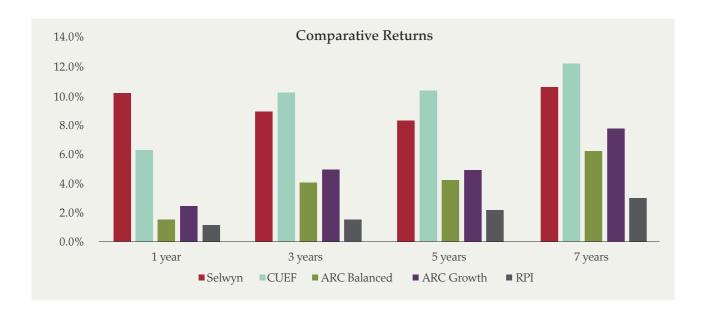

The increased income from conference and rents has resulted in a record level of cash generation. Solid cost control has allowed the college to remain cash positive. Annual benchmarking exercises with other colleges suggest that Selwyn remains amongst the most efficiently run (staff costs 10% below the college average, utility costs 18% below in 2016). Cost control remains a priority, with a robust annual budgeting process in place. The positive cash flows of recent years mean we are beginning to climb aboard the 'virtuous circle', where internally-generated funds are invested in the endowment, producing stronger cash flow, which is in turn invested in the endowment.

Buildings and Estate

Maintaining the college's listed and historic buildings is one of the major costs, with an annual depreciation charge of £1.8 million (23% of total expenditure) set aside to cover their upkeep and replacement. Capital expenditure on buildings amounted to £0.8 million, with a further £0.5 million on fixtures, fittings and equipment. During the year, the new boathouse opened on budget at £3.3 million (the college's share being £825,000) and (almost) on time.

As the Master observes elsewhere, design work has begun on a combined library and auditorium building in Ann's Court, which will cost around £12.2 million. The college will seek planning permission in the summer of 2017 and hopes to dig the first hole in the ground in January 2018, completing by summer 2020. This substantial investment in our infrastructure will help attract and retain students and Fellows to the college and underpin our search for excellence. The flexible space offered by the auditorium is intended to support college events and boost the conference business. It is being designed by Demetri Porphyrios, whose two first buildings grace Ann's Court.

Donations

The college is dependent on donations and benefactions to build its endowment and investment income, to provide direct support for core activities such as student bursaries and grants, new teaching and research posts, and capital expenditure. This year the college received £0.9 million in donations and £1.9 million in new endowments (compared to £0.3 million and £0.7 million respectively last year). It also received £1.3 million in capital grants (£1.5 million last year). This represents a vital source of revenue and the college is very appreciative of the generosity of its alumni, friends and supporters.

Investments

The college's investment portfolio amounted to £51.0 million at 30 June 2016, compared to £44.0 million the previous year. The total return on the portfolio amounted to 10.3% for the year as financial markets brushed off significant events that are beyond the scope of this report. This comfortably outperformed the 6.3% return of the Cambridge University Endowment Fund (CUEF) and the two ARC charity indices. Over the longer term, the college's average annual return for the last seven years has been 10.7%, 1.6% below the University Endowment Fund but well above the ARC indices and RPI. The real value of our assets is being protected, as set out above.

Investment income rose by 7% to £1.5 million: a satisfactory performance at a time when interest on cash deposits is barely exceeding 1% and life in the financial markets remains particularly exciting. Cash holdings increased slightly to 6%, equity weightings were stable at 76%, with property and fixed-interest holdings of 18% making up the balance. The endowment has grown well since 2002 and has passed £50 million for the first time in our history.

Even though £51 million represents excellent progress for Selwyn, this still only ranks 22nd out of the 31 colleges, with the endowment representing just over 4% of that of the wealthiest college, see above.

I have had to remove Trinity from the graph to allow legibility on the scale. Relative to other colleges, the chart below shows that in 2016, Selwyn had 37% of the average college endowment but 99% of the average student numbers, suggesting that we use our limited resources extremely well.

Outlook

The college has made strong progress in stabilising its financial position. The under endowment relative to other colleges means however that we remain somewhat vulnerable to external events. We have modelled the implications of Brexit and other market scenarios on the college and would, like others, be tested by a sustained downturn in student numbers, conference or investment income. That said, however, the college has developed an underlying resilience that gives us the confidence to focus on a major new project. As the reader would expect, we have carefully considered the risks associated with the new building and have concluded that these are not only manageable, but are outweighed by the importance of developing a world-class educational infrastructure. In summary, the cost of standing still is greater.

Senior Tutor's Report

Reflecting on my first year as Senior Tutor is an object lesson in how quickly college life moves along.

A key part of my brief is to maintain and improve academic standards. No single aspect of the college's activities is more important than the recruitment and selection of the students best suited to thrive and succeed on their chosen course. In this we are fortunate in having a dedicated team of three admissions tutors and our first ever full-time schools liaison officer, the latter post funded thanks to the generosity of one of our alumni (Jim Dickinson, 1975). The role of college SLOs is crucial in the ongoing efforts to widen participation and to cast our net as widely as possible in seeking those students with the best potential to succeed here. The team is responsible for hundreds of visits and meetings in Cambridge and elsewhere as well as overseeing a gathered field of over 550 applicants who competed last year for the 120 places available. In a rapidly changing context they have done a splendid job. So have the four graduate tutors who look after our over 200 postgraduates, both full- and part-time.

Next November Dr Georgios Kolios and I shall be part of a team of Cambridge interviewers who will be going to India to interview on behalf of the colleges collectively. This revival of India interviews has come about as a result of collaborations between Selwyn, the Cambridge admissions office and Indian alumni, notably our own Anish Chandaria (1986) and Zia Mody (1976). The vice-chancellor has warmly welcomed this initiative and we anticipate that it will help both the college and the University to encourage more talented Indian students to apply.

One of the great pleasures of being Senior Tutor is the interaction with our junior members. Whether collaborating with the hard-working JCR and MCR committees or watching the myriad activities in which our students excel, I am repeatedly struck both by the commitment to high quality and the enthusiasm that is evident. One excellent example was the inaugural college Three Minute Thesis competition in which undergraduates and postgraduates gave brief presentations about their research projects. Three other initiatives are worth highlighting. Thanks to a generous benefaction from Selwyn friends Peter and Christina Dawson, we are now in a position to offer additional individual and collective support for students dealing with mental health problems. We have also benefitted from the generosity of a number of alumni and others who have supported our efforts to increase the number of grants that we can make to students undertaking volunteering, internship and research opportunities during the long vacation. In terms of personal and career progression such opportunities are invaluable to our students. In addition, we have created the post of careers tutor and Professor Bill Clegg has been active in collaborating with the alumni relations team to set up a programme of events for our students to inform them about various career pathways and opportunities.

Just before I took over from James Keeler I found out that I was to be the designated 'lead' for the college as part of our responsibilities under the government's Prevent Strategy, just one of the ever-growing number of statutory responsibilities that fall upon us: in this case, all higher education institutions (including each Cambridge or Oxford college) have a statutory duty to appoint a lead and develop processes to report to the Funding Council on their duties under counter-terrorism and anti-radicalisation policies.

Being a Senior Tutor can be stressful and rewarding in equal measure. The latter aspect looks after itself. The former is greatly alleviated by the support of the Master and my Fellowship colleagues as well as by the professionalism and efficiency of the tutorial office manager, Gina Vivian-Neal and her team. Life would be much harder without them.

Where does your support go?

All donations to Selwyn make a difference. They might help to endow a teaching post or simply enable a student to make the most of their time here. When it comes to student support, about 25% of our undergraduates are in receipt of some form of bursary or grant. Although we would like to give extra support to many more of our students, we can't currently afford to do so. Those grants we do give are carefully means-tested and awarded to those in greatest need.

Here's what a few of our students have told us about the difference a grant or bursary can make:

"I don't have to worry as much about whether I can afford to pay for course materials or do things with my friends. I have been able to afford to do things like joining sports clubs and going to formal occasionally. Without the bursary I would have almost no money after paying for accommodation, and my parents can't give me much financial support."

"The money from the Cambridge bursary has been very helpful and it has meant that instead of worrying about money and trying to find paid work over the Christmas/Easter vacation periods, I have been able to focus on studying and preparation for exams. Of course, it also helps during term to have one less thing to worry about."

"If I only received the maintenance loan from the government it would be difficult for me to be able to afford to attend university as this money doesn't completely cover all my living costs. My mum cannot afford to provide me with any additional financial support (I am one of three children and she is a single mother). The Cambridge bursary has been essential for me and I am extremely grateful for the support."

Quotes from the reports submitted by recipients of the 1987 Fund for Geography:

"This was an absolutely incredible experience. We were absolutely blown away by the landscape... none of us had seen green fields, lava fields, glaciers, volcanoes and geo-thermal geysers - all in one day"

"We saw and experienced many natural wonders that our textbooks cannot do justice to...

"Since coming to Selwyn I have not had to think about financial constraints once. This is all because of the generosity of alumni shown through the Bursary scheme. With the bursary, I am, for the first time in my life, able to pursue all my academic interests to my full potential. I can afford to attend lectures and talks given by some of the most creative and greatest minds in the world; something which would not have been feasible without the bursary."

Zandile Powell

First year, Human, Social, and Political Sciences

"The bursary made Cambridge a realistic option for me. It has been essential for funding my basic costs of living and has enabled me to work and enjoy university without worrying about how I will be able to fund my time here."

Ben Wood

Third year, Natural Sciences

"Thanks to the generous support of the Sykes Postgraduate Research Studentship this year, I have been able to undertake my PhD research at Selwyn. As a full-time graduate student I have now the extraordinary opportunity to fully focus on my research and to freely engage in a student lifestyle, without having to worry about fees and maintenance costs."

Valentina Mele

Postgraduate student, Italian

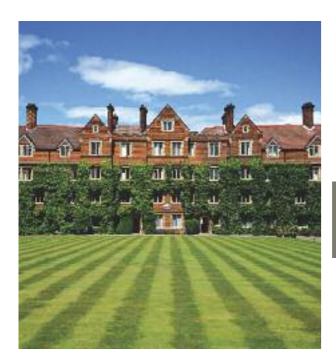

"I joined Selwyn in 2013 to take up the Spencer Fairest Fellowship in Law. This was only possible because donors gave very generously to fund the post. My aim can be stated simply: to push as hard as possible in the pursuit of academic excellence, both in research and in student performance."

Development and Alumni Relations Report

In the latter part of this report we like to acknowledge the generosity of all those who have supported Selwyn by making a donation during the previous calendar year. There are an impressive number of names printed there and the college is extremely grateful for the donations that so many alumni and friends contribute. What this represents is an investment by past generations in the future of the college and its students – and through them, we believe, the wider world.

It's particularly appreciated that people who grew up with the benefits of affordable housing, free university tuition and more generous pension schemes are helping to support more recent 'millennials' who have faced tougher challenges. They are graduating with large student debts, they're unlikely to get on the housing ladder until their thirties and when they eventually retire, in their seventies, they will have few of the pension guarantees provided by earlier schemes. We would, of course, like even more of our older members to join us in helping them.

Through your gifts, the college can provide the bursaries, grants, facilities and outstanding teachers that will help those who are studying here today to make the most of their time and prepare them for a challenging future. You can read elsewhere in the students' own words the impact your donations have made – and how even small amounts can transform a student's experience of studying at Cambridge and the life they then go on to lead.

"Thanks to you and all involved in running this event. It was good fun and great to meet fellow Selwynites from across the years. A successful innovation."

Events

In return for your support, my colleagues work hard to provide a first-class service to all alumni across the generations. There's an ambitious programme of reunions and events that are offered throughout the year, internationally, providing many opportunities for alumni to get-together, network and keep abreast of each other's news and that of the college. In 2016 we introduced the first 25 years reunion dinner and also a 60 years reunion lunch. We hope that both events will become a regular feature of our annual programme.

In addition to our regular college events, some of the many highlights of our 2016 programme included outstanding talks by Selwyn Fellows; Dr Anita Faul on big data and what it means; Dr Janet O'Sullivan on the compensation culture; Dr Robin Hesketh on the connections between our DNA and cancer. We had some memorable visits to places such as Kew Gardens and Kelmscott Manor, and we made the most of a tremendous year at the Fitzwilliam Museum by having curator-led tours of the Colour and the Death on the Nile exhibitions. A new events programme and booking form for 2017 is now available. The most up-to-date information is always available on the alumni website (www.selwynalumni.com) and Facebook. We look forward to you joining us.

Internationally, we were pleased to meet and engage with alumni in Hong Kong and Singapore, New York City, Washington DC and Mumbai. We would like to hear more from alumni living and working abroad – please keep in touch and let us know what we can do for you.

"Thank you for organising yet another enjoyable Christmas carols event at St James' Piccadilly."

Fundraising

In the Bursar's report we can see how hard the college works to make up the difference between what each student contributes by way of fees – and what it actually costs the college and the university to educate each student, and to provide decent accommodation and catering at a level that is affordable. One of the ways we achieve this is thanks to the impressive help we receive, year in year out, from our alumni and friends. During the last financial year (1 July 2015 – 30 June 2016) a total of £4.1million was received as income from donations, new endowments and capital grants, which is a tremendous result. Thank you.

Data Protection – looking after your details

New data protection legislation affecting all charities in the UK will be coming into effect over the next 12 months. Whilst the situation is not yet fully clear, we may be required to amend the formal consents that allow us to send you the full range of college information. We will keep you informed.

14 Selwyn Annual Report 2016 – 2017 15

Once again, a highlight of our year was the annual telephone campaign which raised over £235,000, much of this for student bursaries and hardship grants. I would like to acknowledge the hard work of our 14 student callers who spoke to many hundreds of alumni and other friends. The overwhelming response to the students' calls was that of appreciation, with many of those called choosing to pledge their support and give regularly to Selwyn via Direct Debit. Whenever possible, giving regularly by Direct Debit is by far the most efficient and cost-effective way to support the college. If you would like to help, you'll find a donation form enclosed with this report.

Later in 2017 we will be sharing the details of the new £12.2 million library and auditorium that will complete Ann's Court and so enhance the college's facilities for generations to come. Although the sums involved are challenging, we want all our alumni and friends to be part of this exciting project. We are determined to structure our appeal so that all those who contribute will be recognised whatever the level of support offered. If anybody would like early sight of the project details, together with information on 'naming' or 'in memory of' opportunities, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Families and Friends

In 2016 we opened up the majority of our events to the families of students and others who have become 'Friends of Selwyn'. We have a growing number of parents, grandparents, neighbours and well-wishers who, despite having no formal connection with the college, are inspired to help and support our objectives to be one the best colleges in a world-leading university. Architecturally, many Cambridge colleges seem to have been designed to keep people out – but Selwyn's doors are firmly wedged open to all those who want to be part of our mission and enrich our extended community.

Communications

Staying in touch with you all in this busy world is such an important part of what we do. But we can only do this if we have your correct contact, phone and email details. So if you move – please tell us. Neither the college or the university ever share your details with anybody else.

The big change in recent years has been the rise in popularity of social media such as Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others. Once thought of as marginal forms of communication, the Selwyn digital platforms are increasingly important and have benefited from the media expertise of the Master who takes a close interest in their content and how they are used. In terms of engagement, more people use the Selwyn Facebook site than any other Cambridge college. The main advantages of Facebook and other social media is that it allows the college to reach a very large number of people at the same time – and frequently. News and other important information can be spread very fast, allowing people to respond quickly. We can also promote events speedily and cheaply and reach groups of alumni and friends who have common interests. Our social media pages reach wider audiences and can help to challenge preconceptions and inspire those who might apply here. So for all these reasons, and if you haven't yet done so, we would like to encourage you to explore digital Selwyn. To find us on Facebook, anyone can go to facebook.com and search for 'Selwyn College Cambridge'. Those words put into Google will also lead you to our website which has all the latest information you need.

However, we also recognise that these digital platforms are not suitable for all our communication needs, or are necessarily what everybody wants. Producing reports such as this, or the annual Calendar and magazine, will remain an important part of what we do. Likewise, our monthly email updates provide a good snapshot of current news, which we know many of you look forward to receiving. But despite the wonders of our digital age, the most compelling and effective method of communication is the oldest of all – speech. Each alumnus/a and friend has the potential to be an effective ambassador for Selwyn simply by talking about your time here, and by acknowledging the ways in which it influenced – and perhaps still influences – your life. When you come together with other Selwynites please don't be shy in talking about your support for the college. As a charity, we will always need your help. How you choose to deliver that is entirely up to you but however you do so, I guarantee that you will find us grateful.

Legacies

One in ten UK households is now classified as being worth at least £1 million. For most, this doesn't mean a life of unbridled luxury – but more often simply reflects the value of their homes, especially for those who live in the south east. Unfortunately, the tax office currently makes no distinctions and the numbers of people paying inheritance tax is set to double over the next five years. Leaving a legacy to any charity is tax free, and one of the most effective ways of supporting Selwyn is to make some provision for the college in your Will. This could be a specified amount – or perhaps a simple percentage of your estate. All of us could probably sign up to leaving at least 1% of our estate to Selwyn without depriving our families or other causes – and cumulatively, this would make a huge difference to the college in the decades ahead.

Towards the end of this report you will see the list of all those who have already taken the decision to leave some form of legacy to Selwyn by joining the 1882 Society. Very few charitable organisations have been around for 135 years and it's a relatively good bet that Selwyn will be around in another 135 years as well. Providing for one's children is of course a natural inclination; leaving a legacy to Selwyn will help to ensure that their children and subsequent generations can also experience the Selwyn that you enjoyed and which others before you had helped to create and sustain. Further information is on the alumni website or we have a legacy brochure available which we can send you.

If you would like to follow up on any of the above, my direct contact details are below and I would be very pleased to hear from you.

Record of Donors

I would like to extend my sincere thanks, on behalf of the Fellows, students and staff, to all those who have supported Selwyn College by making donations in the calendar year 2016. The following names are supplemented by many alumni and friends who wish to remain anonymous. If your donation was made or received after 31st December 2016 we will be delighted to include your name in the next report.

We would also like to thank all those who have notified us that they have included Selwyn in their Will, thus becoming members of the 1882 Society. This special way of supporting the college is greatly appreciated. Members are indicated by <sup>1882</sup>

Those who have given to other college sports are acknowledged under the Vickerstaff Sports individuals who have been generously supporting Selwyn continuously for 10 years or more. The college is immensely grateful for this loyal and long-term support. They are indicated by 10.

With renewed thanks and best wishes,

Roger Mosey

The 1882 Society

All those who leave a legacy to Selwyn, or intend to do so, are warmly invited to become members of the 1882 Society which now has almost 200 members. Remembering Selwyn in your Will is one of the best ways to help the college in the future. For a confidential discussion please contact Mike Nicholson, Development Director.

Henry Annan

"The Annan family has over 100 years' association with Cambridge University. My uncle, Tete Mensa Annan came up to Peterhouse in 1913. My father, Daniel Nee Annan was at Selwyn in 1931. I matriculated at Selwyn in 1966. All three of us read medicine followed by successful careers.

Leaving a legacy through the 1882 Society is a way of enhancing the welfare of Selwyn and making a difference to the lives of other people. It allows them to reach their full potential academically and socially at the College and the University."

The Permanent Henley Fund

The Permanent Henley Fund assists Selwyn College Boat Club by providing financial support for the maintenance and purchase of equipment, and by paying for coaching and training camps. The college is very grateful to all alumni who donate to this fund. If you would like to make a gift, further details can be found on the Boat Club website at www.selwynrowing.org.uk. Online donations to the Henley Fund can be made through the Selwyn website at www.selwynalumni.com/makeagift.

In this section we also gratefully thank those who have supported the Selwyn College Boat Club, via the college, or have made generous contributions towards the building of a new boathouse for Selwyn.

The Vickerstaff Sports Bursary Scheme

This list gratefully acknowledges those college members, including members of the Hermes Club and the Sirens Club, who support sporting activities at Selwyn College.

"Today I picked up my Hermes/Sirens Sports Grants award and I am writing to express my deep gratitude for the award.

I'd first like to thank the alumni of Selwyn for their donations in support of sport at Selwyn; as a Malaysian student who has the privilege of studying at Selwyn only because I received external sponsorship, this award makes a world of difference to me, especially given that the squash Blues team receives absolutely no funding. Thank you for easing the financial burden of participating in sport at Cambridge. I'd be very grateful if you could pass on my thanks to the alumni who made this possible and to say that I'll continue working hard at squash (and my academics!), and try to do justice to the award. Thank you again. I am deeply grateful."
